SENATOR GOEBEL SHOT!

Cowardly Attempt to Assassinate the Courageous Democratic Leader Tuesday at Noon.

Murderers Conceal Themselves in the Executive Building and Shoot Their Victim as He Approached the Capitol Steps—Deploable Culmination of Infamous and Persistent Efforts to Incite Bloodshed.

LATEST NEWS FROM THE SCENE.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 30.—William Goebel was shot and very seriously injured, shortly after 11 a. m. Tuesday, while passing through the statehouse yard on his way to the Capitol building. Two shots were fired from a rifle, only one of them taking effect. It struck Goebel in the right side, one-third of the distance down from the arm-pit to the hip. The ball passed entirely through the body, coming out below the right shoulder blade. It is not thought by the physicians in charge that the wound will prove fatal, unless complications set in.

Harlan Whittaker, a farmer from Butler county, Ky., is under arrest, charged with having fired the shots, but he denies that he had anything to do with it. Five revolvers were found upon him when he was taken into custody.

Mr. Goebel, in company with Colonel Jack Chinn and Warden Ephram Lillard of the Frankfort penitentiary, was walking up the sidewalk leading from the street to the Capitol building, Goebel being on the right of the three. When the three men were two-thirds of the distance from the street to the capitol, a shot was fired from the third story of the building occupied by the offices of the governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, and other leading officials of the state. The ball struck Mr. Goebel in the side, and he instantly dropped to the pavement. Chinn and Lillard instantly seized him, Chinn saying as he did so: "I guess they have got you, Goebel."

"Yes," replied the wounded man, "I guess they have got me sure."

While Chinn was holding the wounded man, supporting his head in his arms, four shots more were fired at both men. All of them struck close, making the dust fly from the brick pavement. Both Chinn and Lillard stuck to their friend, neither of them moving from his side until the firing ceased, when Lillard ran for help. He had not far to go, for there is always a crowd around the gates of the Capitol building. A crowd of men were around Mr. Goebel in less than a minute, and he was carried to the office of Dr. E. E. Hume in the basement of the Capitol hotel, about 1,000 feet from the spot where the shooting occurred.

Dr. Hume made a superficial examination of the wound which had, he declared, penetrated the right lung. Mr. Goebel was then hastily taken from the office of Dr. Hume to his own room on the second floor of the Capital hotel. Guards were stationed at the foot of every staircase leading to the second floor, and nobody, not even the guests of the hotel, were allowed to pass. A more extended examination made by Dr. Hume and several other physicians who had been called, resulted in the announcement that the wound was not necessarily fatal, and that the wounded man would in all probability recover. The ball, it was found, had inflicted a wound which was somewhat of a glancing nature, and had not gone through the lung in a direct line.

The house was in session when the shooting occurred, and the senate was to have met in 20 minutes. The Capitol Building was therefore filled with members of the legislature, and to say that excitement followed is putting it very mildly. From both halls men ran wildly down the steps without hats or coats, and one member of the house came out carrying in his hand a bill on which he had been arguing when the shooting occurred.

Within three minutes after the shooting a line of men was thrown around the building from which the shots had come, with the intention of preventing the escape of anybody from the structure. John W. Miles, an aged citizen of Frankfort, was standing at the foot of the stairway leading from the first floor of the office building to the west, when a man, evidently a mountaineer, came rushing down the steps. Miles instantly threw his arms around the man's body, holding him with all his strength, calling loudly for help. It was close at hand, and no escape was possible for the prisoner, even had he attempted to make the effort. Men stood around him on every side with drawn revolvers in their hands, and the slightest attempt at resistance would have resulted in his instant death. He submitted to arrest very quietly. He gave his name as Harlan Whittaker. He was searched at once, and three large revolvers, all fully loaded, were taken from him. None of the cartridges had been exploded, and there was no sign of any of the weapons having been in use.

That the attempt to kill Mr. Goebel was deliberate admits of no doubt whatever, and the only wonder is that it failed, except for poor marksmanship. The window from which the shots were fired was raised about eight inches from the bottom, and the man who fired at him had a perfect range of not over 500 feet, with Goebel's tall figure in a black overcoat in sharp relief against the white snow-covered ground behind him. Both Colonel Chinn and Warden Lillard declared that smokeless powder was used in the cartridges that were fired at Goebel.

The Republican officials acted with the greatest promptitude. Adjutant General Collier was sitting in his office when the shots were fired. He was not over 300 feet from Goebel when he fell. He instantly rushed out of the building, and, being told that Goebel had been shot, he realized that prompt steps must be taken to avoid the turbulence which might easily follow the great excitement, which was increasing every minute. He at once telephoned to the armory on the hill, where, all during the gubernatorial contest, the local company of infantry had been held in reserve, and within 20 minutes the company, 30 strong, under command of Captain Woleott, was drawn up in front of the Capitol grounds, and no one was permitted to enter or leave.

Troops Ordered Out.
It is possible there will be more trouble between hot-headed partisans of both parties. As soon as it was noised around that Goebel had been shot members of the legislature made a wild rush for the telegraph offices and filed voluminous messages to their constituents, and within an hour replies began to pour in, the general run of them having one tenor, which was, "We are coming."

All the military strength of the state has been called out and hurried to Frankfort.

The Democrats are keeping exceedingly close watch over the person of J. C. W. Beckham, the contestant for the position of lieutenant governor. In the event of the death of Goebel, he is their only hope, and they declare, with earnestness, that if Goebel dies, there will be no governor but Beckham.

There was talk on every side of placing under arrest every man who was in the building when the shots were fired, even including Governor Taylor, though, of course, nobody believed for a moment that he had any knowledge of the crime. He expressed himself immediately after the shooting as being extremely sorry that such a thing had happened.

Assistant Secretary of State Davidson said after the shooting: "There have been about 40 men, more or less, sleeping in the upper part of the building for nearly a week. They were allowed to spend the night there, and took their meals elsewhere. We do not know their names. We are more than anxious to lend every possible aid to the authorities in finding the assassin."

NEW COAL SCALE.
Miners and Operators Still Wrangling at the Conference.

Indianapolis, Jan. 30.—The joint conference of coal operators and miners resumed the discussion of the two propositions submitted Monday afternoon. President Mitchell, for the miners, was the first speaker. He complimented Operator H. L. Chapman of Ohio on his argument on the "National Defense Fund." "We would like to engage Mr. Chapman as an organizer for the United Mine Workers," said Mr. Mitchell. "He would be the best man we could get."

J. S. Morton, president of the Sunday Creek Coal company of Columbus, O., followed Mitchell. Morton said that figures often lie. He took issue with Mitchell on the average earnings of mines, saying that the past year would show many advantages to the men. Morton declared that Ohio operators will not pay advances on run-of-mine basis.

Bryan and Lentz.
Boston, Jan. 30.—William J. Bryan of Nebraska and Congressman John J. Lentz of Ohio, who are on a 10-day speaking tour of the northeast states, arrived in this city from Providence. At the south terminal station a crowd was waiting for the train, and as it drew into the depot broke into cheers. Reception committees from the Democratic state committee and the Bryan club were also at the station, and under escort of these gentlemen the visitors took carriages for the American House, where a reception was held.

American Steamer Seized.
San Francisco, Jan. 30.—The steamer Curacao has arrived from Mexican ports with $680,000 in treasure. She reports that the schooner Lottie M has been seized by the Mexican officials at Ensenada for attempting to evade the customs regulations.

IN ANOTHER TRAP.

Buller's Communication in Danger of Being Cut Off.

BOERS TO STRIKE HIS BASE.

May Hurl an Overwhelming Force Against Cheveley Camp.

BRITISH RETREAT BADLY RETARDED.

Immense Transport Train Interferes With the Mobility of the Army. English Beaten Off at Colenso—Thousands Fell at Spion Kop.

London, Jan. 30.—Buller's danger is now forcing itself on the military experts. A committee of national defense has already taken it up, and is gravely considering it. Lord Roberts himself has communicated his anxiety. It is said. He cabled the committee that until Buller and his forces arrive safely from their present position to the south of the Little Tugela river, they will be in imminent danger of having their communications cut.

Lord Roberts has pointed out that Buller has with him an immense transport train, carrying his ammunition and supplies. This transport train interferes with the mobility of his army.

Buller's main force is now about 22 miles from its base at Frere and Cheveley. It is between the Big Tugela river, over which it has retreated, and the Little Tugela river, over which it has to retreat in order to begin to the march to its base. It will take days for Buller's army to get back to its base.

Meanwhile the Boers are a few miles away from that base in force at Colenso. Last Tuesday they crossed the river there and made a reconnaissance of the British camp, evidently with a view of ascertaining the strength of the force which Buller left behind to guard his base and van. The party that crossed came into contact with Buller's rear guard and killed several of the British. That reconnaissance indicated a purpose on the part of the Boers to cut Buller's communications off. Should they hurl an overwhelming force over the Tugela and crush the British at Cheveley, they would have Buller in a trap.

Military associates of General White are of the opinion that he will make a desperate attempt to break through the Boer lines and escape from Ladysmith; that though such a movement would cost a tremendous sacrifice of life, it would be preferable to surrender to the Boers. The statement that Lord Roberts advised the abandonment of Ladysmith is not generally credited in London, but in view of the fact that the supply of provisions will not hold out for more than a week longer, it is not probable that any aid can be rendered to General White inside of that time, and he will have but two courses open—surrender, or cut his way out. Several military experts in London are of the opinion that the British in Kimberley, at Modder river and on the Tugela will also be left to work out their own salvation.

The war office continues to hold back definite news in regard to the casualties at Spion Kop resulting from Wednesday's battle, but reports from various sources state that the British losses were even greater than indicated in the Boer dispatches of Sunday night. One report states that the British casualties exceeded 1,800 dead and 1,000 wounded. In view of the large number of officers reported killed—twice as many as at Magersfontein, and four times as many as at Colenso—there is reason to fear that the Boer report of the British losses will prove nearly accurate.

General Buller reports that the casualties to the noncommissioned officers and men in the two actions of Jan. 20 and 21 were: Seventeen killed, 233 wounded and 6 missing.

OPENING OF PARLIAMENT.

Reading of the Queen's Speech and Action of the Irish Members.

London, Jan. 30.—The seventh session of the Fourteenth parliament of Queen Victoria opened at 2 p. m., after the customary formalities. The speaker, William Gourt Gully, arrived at the house of commons at an early hour. There was a large attendance of members. The gentleman usher of the Black Rod, General Sir M. S. Biddulph, summoned the commons to the house of lords, at 2:05 p. m., where the lord high chancellor, Earl Halsbury, read the queen's speech.

The queen's speech was read at the opening. Touching upon the Transvaal war, she deeply grieves over the loss of so many valuable lives in "resisting the invasion of the South African colonies by the Boers." She exhorts the soldiery to renew its exertion for the maintenance of the empire. The courage of the home and colonial forces are highly commended. She regrets the famine in India, and says timely measures have been taken by the government to relieve starvation and distress. Owing to the South African war, she asks parliament not to shrink from any outlay of funds that may be necessary to carry it to a successful conclusion.

The attendance of peers and of the public was not extraordinary. All sections of the Irish Nationalists were absent from the opening session, owing to their attendance at a meeting. Messrs. Harrington and Redmond urged that the time had come to restore unity in the ranks of the parliamentary representatives of Irish Nationalism. Mr. Redmond described the prestige of Great Britain as practically shattered, and said there seemed to be no better time for promoting union upon a sound and better basis, coupled with a policy of unity in combat and entire independence of all the English political parties. He then moved a resolution declaring at an end the division of the Irish Nationalist representatives, and that henceforth they should act together as one united party. The resolution was carried unanimously.

British Beaten Off.

Pretoria, Jan. 30.—A dispatch from Colesburg, Cape Colony, says Commandant Delarey reports that a large body of British advanced Thursday, Jan. 25, and he attacked them, causing the British to retire after suffering severe loss. The Boer casualties were two men slightly wounded. General Grobler reports heavy fighting on Jan. 27, the British in great force endeavoring to surround the Boer positions. General Schoeman hastened to the assistance of General Grobler. General Schoeman has returned, and reports that the British were repulsed with severe loss, and that the Boers maintained their positions.

Shell Factory Destroyed.

Durban, Jan. 30.—A refugee, who has arrived here from Johannesburg, reports the destruction of the Boer shell factory at that place on Jan. 20. The loss, it is added, is irreparable.

OPPOSES EXPANSION.

Statesman Bacon Addresses the Senate on the Philippines.

Washington, Jan. 30.—The feature of the session of the senate was Mr. Bacon's speech on his Philippine resolution.

Mr. Bacon, after discussing some preliminary points, said in part: "Under these resolutions, if adopted, the United States will do for the Philippines practically the same as they have undertaken to do for Cuba. To hold them a subject colony makes necessarily a revolution in our system of government, which should not be aided by anyone who is loyal to the principles upon which that system is founded. In the nature of things, there can be no imperial republic. Under such a government the form of a republic may be preserved, but under it the spirit of republicanism must die."

"The Philippine Islands will be our weak spot, and that will be the point of attack by our enemies, because it is the weak spot. If our navy, small as it is, were in Atlantic waters, it could be depended upon in large measure to defend our coasts. But with our army and navy in the Philippines, and with our long seacoast comparatively undefended by fortifications, what a plight we would be in if we should become involved in a war with a European power."

"To permanently retain the islands will annually cost the United States more than $100,000,000. The large increase in the standing army will alone annually cost that, and that will by no means be all the expense. The pretense that the Philippines are necessary to our trade in the Orient is a delusion and a snare."

Workmen Injured.

Philadelphia, Jan. 30.—Two men, William Stafford and Peter Drexler, were probably fatally injured by an explosion of powder at the Frankford arsenal. The men, who are employed at the arsenal, had purchased from the government a lot of cartridges captured from the Spanish at Santiago. These they placed in a small building on the grounds and during their leisure moments extracted the powder. While thus engaged, it is believed a spark from the stove communicated with the powder. The building was wrecked.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 31, 1900.

WEATHER FORECAST FOR KENTUCKY.—Fair and continued cold to-day and Thursday.

The deplorable political condition that has prevailed at Frankfort and throughout the State for weeks culminated shortly before noon Tuesday in a most infamous and cowardly attempt to assassinate Senator Goebel, the courageous Democratic leader. Since that mob of armed and drunken mountaineers reached Frankfort some days ago, people who knew the desperate character of these men have been prepared for news of a deplorable tragedy any moment. That mob did not all return home. Dispatches from Frankfort have told that many of these desperadoes were still there and were to be seen sitting about in the offices of Republican State officials in the very building from which the assassins' bullets were fired. The dispatches also stated that some of these men were allowed to sleep in these offices. That some of these desperadoes fired the shots, there can be little doubt. The Republican officials who harbored these armed men knew their character, and their very act in taking them in and giving them the run of the building places these officials in the position of lending them aid and encouragement.

These officials can not escape, therefore, from responsibility for the cowardly attempt to assassinate the man who has openly and courageously opposed them for months. Besides, some of these officials as well as other Republican leaders have talked bloodshed from the very commencement of the recent campaign. Republican editors, too, encouraged it in their columns. The editor of the Public Ledger, no later than a week ago, when one Republican deliberately shot down another in the Capital Hotel at Frankfort and when two or three innocent bystanders were shot to death, brazenly remarked, "What a pity Mr. Colson's gun was not turned on that Contest Board! About two weeks ago the following dispatch sent out from Lexington was published in a Republican paper:

"It is freely predicted here to-day by leading Republicans that the crisis cannot be delayed much longer, and that should shooting begin Goebel will be the first to fall. Some say Goebel should be shot and that Governor Taylor should pardon the murderer."

Here was a deliberate and infamous suggestion of just what was attempted at Frankfort Tuesday. When Republican papers published such infamous stuff as the above it is not a matter of surprise that people remarked, "Just what I expected," when news of the attempted assassination came.

It is to be hoped that men of cool judgment will take hold of affairs at Frankfort and bring order out of chaos, without further bloodshed.

The individual who rejoices over the work of a cowardly assassin is worse than the assassin.

KENTUCKY REPUBLICANISM.

Their Leaders Responsible for the Mob of Drunken Mountaineers That Visited the Capital.

[Benton-Trentonian.]

Last Thursday Kentucky presented a political situation without a parallel in the history of the country, a situation fraught with danger, not only to the State of Kentucky, but to our form of government. A thousand men from the mountainous districts of Kentucky, armed cap-a-pie, as it were, and organized for the purpose of over-awing and intimidating the lawfully elected legislative branch of the government, stepped from the train early Thursday morning.

This demonstration of this armed force of lawless and excited mountaineers is the result of the tactics that have been pursued by the Republican leaders and press, not only of Kentucky, but of many of the adjoining States before and since the election.

These men came to Frankfort under the auspices of the Mark Hanna constituted leaders of the Republican party. This demonstration has been predicted by the Republican leaders and the Republican press, time after time, many weeks ago. Not only was this armed force demonstration made under the auspices of the leaders of the Kentucky Republicans, but these leaders met them at the train and welcomed them with open arms, then escorted them to the state house where food and refreshments were served to them, and we all know what refreshments mean in Kentucky. Not only were they fed by the Republicans but were treated to incendiary addresses relating to the gubernatorial contest which is in progress. Threat after threat has been made by leading Republicans, among whom was Senator Deboe, that Goebel would never be allowed to take his seat, even if he was awarded the certificate by the Legislature.

These armed men completely terrorized the whole city of Frankfort. While this body of men was refused admittance to the legislative halls and lobbies yet they strolled around in the basements, and grounds of the state house, drinking and making the air blue with their sulphurous profanity and threats.

After terrorizing and intimidating as many as they could, they decided to return to their lawless haunts, where they make "moonshine" and murder their fellow man. But before leaving they riddled the depot with the death dealing bullets from their unerring Winchesters.

HIS VISIT TO VESUVIUS.

And What He Thought as He Gazed Into the Fiery Pit.

An American who detests sightseeing upon principle loafed for six weeks at Sorrento without stirring in the direction of places most travelers would have thought it criminal to omit. His only dread was the cross questioning of kind friends when he got home. To confess that he had deliberately staid away from all those celebrated spots of interest would bring down no end of scorn and denunciation upon him. But sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof, and the American resolved to trust to inspiration to get him out of such possible scrapes. The first person he met after leaving Sorrento was an American woman on the train, and the first thing she wanted to know was if he had climbed Vesuvius.

"I did," said the American without a quiver.

"Oh, tell me all about it!" cried the woman. "How interesting it must have been! My husband never would let me go up, but I'd just love to hear your experience."

The American, having heard the whole story many, many times, plunged into it with much detail. He described the long drive from Naples to the foot of the mountain and the steepness of the inclined railway and the way the women of the party squealed and all the rest of it. From time to time the woman interrupted with some searching question, but so well did he know his lines that never once did she catch him napping. At last, after a realistic account of how, after leaving the train he had plunged his way on foot through the hot, powdery lava to the crater's very edge, the American paused for breath.

"And what," asked the woman, "were your sensations as you gazed down into that fiery pit?"

"Madam," said the American, "I thought of the fate that awaited all Mars."—New York Sun.

New York, Jan. 30.—Robert Fitzsimmons now proclaims that he was drugged when he was whipped by James Jeffries for the championship of the world at Coney Island last June. He says: "It is impossible for me to point to the man who was responsible for my condition on the night of June 9, when I fought Jeffries, but this I do know, and I say it with emphasis, and with full knowledge of the consequences, I was drugged by some one, and it is only natural to suppose that there was a conspiracy arranged to accomplish my defeat. During the rest between the second and third rounds I took a long drink of mineral water, and following that I have only a hazy recollection of one or two incidents of the fight."

Tribute Paid to the Many Virtues of the Jewish Woman.

[Philadelphia Times.]

The troubles of poor Madame Dreyfus, her great love for her husband, her beautiful motherhood, her modesty and virtue, which for the last several years have been kept before the public, have turned the eyes of all the world upon not only Madame Dreyfus herself, but upon Jewish women as a class; and the more we have studied them the more we have found to admire. It has long been conceded that among the best husbands and fathers are the Jewish men. Notice how few women and girls of Jewish blood are found among the bread-earning women of to-day. "If a Jew earns one dollar the woman nearest him gets seventy-five cents of it, and that without being told to bring the change back," said a Hebrew father to me one day lately. So carefully is the virtue of the Jewish woman guarded by the man who happens to be responsible for her that he will work his hands bare of flesh rather than let her go out to battle with the world in an effort to earn her own living. Her best traits are nourished in the home and she is taught to shun all the ways of life that would lead to unwholesome notoriety. It is the rarest thing to hear of the Jews or Jewess being unfaithful to the marriage vows or to see Jewish names on the court's list of applicants for divorce.
